Dear LEKSIKA Journal Editor,

I/We wish to submit an original research article entitled “The Influence of Studying Abroad on Word-Production Acquisition and Intercultural Growth of Indonesian EFL Learner: An Interview Study” for consideration by Leksika: Jurnal Bahasa, Sastra dan Pengajarannya. I/We confirm that this work is original and has not been published elsewhere, nor is it currently under consideration for publication elsewhere.

In this paper, I/we report on/show that the study presented above concerning the development of language skills have the positive effects of study abroad on fluency and pronunciation, regardless of the duration of the stay. The communicative atmosphere of study abroad helps students develop their language skills. Continuous communication in a wide variety of contexts has enabled students to learn the target language on an ongoing basis. This research shows that friends in the neighbourhood and school contribute greatly to language development. The results showed that internal and external influences affected the English accomplishment of the participant.

This is significant because there are numerous statistical studies on the importance of studies abroad have mainly identified language acquisition as a successful way but not many has shown on the factors.

Thank you for your consideration of this manuscript.

Sincerely,
Hanifah Hifni
